Subacute Care Community of Practice

“Health is that state of being in which a person’s body, mind and spirit are in balance. Functioning with a high level of wellness and in tune with the natural and social environments, as well as the spiritual environment.”

A.R.Peile, 1997

We welcome all input, your questions, contributions and ideas so that together we can build a training module for health professionals working with Aboriginal people.

Statement of purpose: The WA Community of Practice in Subacute Care will provide a supportive, interdisciplinary forum for the sharing and exchange of skills, knowledge and resources in subacute care, with the aim of improving practice and the delivery of quality, patient centred care. (Created 2012). TRACS WA may film/record this event for educational and promotional purposes. Unless you advise TRACS WA otherwise, we will assume you consent to your image and voice being used in this way.
